Re: United States v. Joshua Schulte, 17 Cr. 548 (PAC)

Hon. Judge Crotty:

We write in short reply to the government's letter arguing that CIPA section 5 as applied in this case is no different than any other case including United States v. Lee, 18 Cr. 89 (EDVA). Govt. Reply at 2. The government is wrong.

In the Lee case there was no dispute of how the theft occurred or who was responsible for leaking classified information. As Statement of Facts in Lee make clear, the classified information was stolen in a very mundane way: written in his notebooks and by saving information on a thumb drive that Lee had on his person when he was arrested. Exhibit A, Statement of Facts admitted to by Defendant Jerry Lee.

Mr. Schulte's case on the other hand involves no such proof. The forensic evidence and detailed analysis of the forensic evidence, if disclosed to the case team, would in fact provide a road map to the government of how the defendant plans to defend the allegations against him. Similarly, Hashimi and Bin Laden did not involve charges of espionage but of terrorism. The CIPA 5 disclosure apparently did not involve detailed disclosure of forensic evidence such that a government expert could review and then discuss with government counsel to build a rebuttal case or to cross examine the defendant, which is very much the case here.

The government may blame defense counsel for not being clairvoyant and raising these issues earlier but the fact remains that we (and the CIS) have found no case (espionage or otherwise) that raises such difficult CIPA issues and those involving CIPA disclosures from a defendant who intends to testify at trial.

Requiring Mr. Schulte to provide such notice to the case/trial team now would prematurely force him to reveal details about his defense strategy, and potential testimony at trial in violation of the Fifth Amendment and Sixth Amendment.

The government has insisted that its walled counsel is able to deal with the CIA and has stated that on the record. As the DOJ has walled counsel, they would suffer no prejudice or delay by receiving CIPA 5 notice in the first instance.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Alexandria Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

JERRY CHUN SHING LEE,

Defendant.

Criminal No. 1:18-cr-89
(Hon. T. S. Ellis III)

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The United States and the defendant, JERRY CHUN SHING LEE (hereinafter, "the defendant"), agree that at trial, the United States would have proven the following facts beyond a reasonable doubt with admissible and credible evidence:

1. From on or about April 26, 2010 to on or about January 15, 2018, in the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, including locations outside of the jurisdiction of any particular state or district, the defendant did unlawfully and knowingly conspire with others to communicate, deliver, and transmit to a foreign government, to wit: the Government of the People's Republic of China ("PRC"), and representatives, officers, and agents thereof, directly and indirectly, documents, writings and information relating to the national defense of the United States, with the intent and reason to believe that such documents, writings and information were to be used to the injury of the United States and to the advantage of a foreign government, namely, the Government of the PRC.

2. The defendant is a naturalized United States citizen who principally resided in Hong Kong during the timeframe of the conspiracy. He entered duty with the Central Intelligence Agency (“CIA”) in 1994. The CIA’s headquarters are in Langley, Virginia, which is within the Eastern District of Virginia. As a CIA case officer, the defendant worked in various overseas locations, including China.

3. In the course of his employment with the CIA, the defendant obtained and maintained a Top Secret security clearance. In addition to his Top Secret security clearance, the defendant also obtained and maintained access to Sensitive Compartmented Information (“SCI”). The U.S. government entrusted the defendant with access to sensitive government materials, including classified documents, materials, and information related to the national defense that were closely held by the government.

4. The defendant resigned from the CIA in July 2007.

5. On July 13, 2007, prior to leaving government service, the defendant signed a CIA security exit form that contained the following language: “I give my assurance that there is no classified material in my possession, custody, or control at this time.” The CIA terminated the defendant’s security clearance upon his departure from government service.

6. In or about July 2007, the defendant began working in Hong Kong for a large international tobacco company. This company terminated the defendant in or about June 2009. He continued to receive salary payments from it until in or about May 2010.

7. In or about June 2009, the defendant and a business associate began discussing the formation of a new business. This business associate was a former Hong Kong police officer, who, as the defendant well knew, had close ties to the PRC’s Ministry of State Security (“MSS”). The MSS is a PRC intelligence service that handles civilian intelligence collection and is responsible for counter-intelligence and foreign intelligence, as well as political security within the PRC. The stated purpose of the company was to serve as an intermediary between foreign tobacco companies and China's State Tobacco Monopoly Administration ("STMA").

8. On April 13, 2010, while in Hong Kong, the defendant applied online to the CIA for re-employment.

9. On April 26, 2010, the defendant and the business associate traveled from Hong Kong to Shenzhen, China to attend a private dinner. Present at the dinner were persons whom the defendant understood to be MSS Chinese intelligence officers ("IOs"). During the dinner, the Chinese IOs excused the defendant's business associate and then offered to compensate the defendant in exchange for national defense information from his time as a CIA case officer. The IOs told the defendant that they had prepared a gift of $100,000 cash and that they would take care of him "for life" in exchange for his cooperation.

10. On May 11, 2010, while overseas, the defendant met with a former CIA colleague and reported that he had been approached by two IOs at a conference, which was false. The defendant also failed to reveal the IOs' request for information as well as their offers to give him $100,000 and take care of him for life.

11. Sometime in or about May 2010, the defendant began receiving a series of written requests for information (taskings) from the IOs. The majority of the taskings asked the defendant to reveal sensitive information about the CIA, including national defense information. The taskings continued into at least 2011.

- a. During 2012, the defendant had a series of interviews with the CIA. All of these interviews occurred within the Eastern District of Virginia. Throughout these interviews, in response to questions about what the IOs had wanted from him, the defendant intentionally failed to disclose that he had received taskings from the IOs.
- b. In May 2013, during an interview with Special Agents of the FBI, the defendant admitted that he had received taskings. He described the taskings but stated that he had not kept the written requests because they would tend to incriminate him.

12. On May 14, 2010, the defendant made or caused to be made into his personal bank account in Hong Kong a cash deposit of $138,000 HKD (approximately $17,468 USD). This would be the first of hundreds of thousands of dollars (USD equivalent) in cash deposits the defendant made or caused to be made into his personal HSBC account from this date through December 2013. Throughout the year prior to this initial cash deposit on May 14, 2010, the defendant had not made any comparable cash deposits into this HSBC account.

13. On May 26, 2010, in Hong Kong, the defendant created on his laptop computer a document that described, inter alia, certain locations to which the CIA would assign officers with certain identified experience, as well as the particular location and timeframe of a sensitive CIA operation. After the defendant created this document, he transferred it on an unknown date from his laptop to a thumb drive.

- a. On August 13, 2012, the FBI conducted a court-authorized search of a hotel room in Honolulu, Hawaii registered in the defendant's name.

The defendant was renting this hotel room while relocating with his family from Hong Kong to the Eastern District of Virginia. The search revealed that the defendant possessed the thumb drive within his personal luggage. The FBI forensically imaged the thumb drive and later located the document in the unallocated space of the thumb drive, meaning that it had been deleted.

- b. When confronted with this document by Special Agents of the FBI during an interview on May 22, 2013, the defendant falsely denied that he possessed it, claimed not to know who created it, and denied knowing why it would have been on his computer. He also denied deleting the document.
- c. In a subsequent FBI interview on May 28, 2013, the defendant admitted that he created the document in response to two taskings from the IOs and transferred it to a thumb drive. He also said he thought about giving it to the IOs but never did. A U.S. government official with original classification authority later determined that the information the defendant included in this document was national defense information of the United States that was classified at the Secret level.

14. In or about June 2010, the defendant and his business associate registered a company, FTM International (“FTM”). Bank records later revealed that FTM had de minimis legitimate business. By in or about December 2011, the defendant had sold his stake in FTM for a nominal sum ($1 Hong Kong Dollar per share).

15. In or about summer of 2010, the precise date being unknown, in response to a tasking from the IOs, the defendant drew a sketch of the floor plan of a particular CIA facility located abroad, which was no longer in use. The defendant never disclosed this tasking or the sketch he created during the 2012 CIA interviews.

- a. On May 31, 2013, during an interview with Special Agents of the FBI, the defendant admitted that he created the drawing. He stated that he tore it up, threw it away, and never gave it to the IOs.

16. On March 8, 2012, during the first of the CIA interviews described in paragraph 11, the defendant falsely stated that he had not traveled to mainland China for approximately two years so as not to give the IOs a chance to talk to him.

- a. As late as December 7, 2012, the defendant continued to falsely tell the CIA interviewers that he had not been to mainland China since being approached by the IOs in April 2010, when in fact, by this time, he had traveled into mainland China on two separate occasions.

17. On April 22, 2012, a Yahoo! email account was created from an IP address that resolved to Guangzhou, China. The account's user name related to one of the defendant's close family members.

- a. During a 2013 FBI interview, the defendant disclosed that he had received several email accounts from the IOs. The defendant stated that he could not remember any of the other accounts but that he could remember this account because of the connection to the close family member.

18. On August 13, 2012, the FBI conducted the court-authorized search referenced in paragraph 13. In addition to the thumb drive described above, that search revealed the defendant possessed within his personal luggage a 2002 Day Planner and an address book. The two books contained handwritten notes made by the defendant, including personal information such as banking and password information. The preponderance of the notes related to his work as a CIA case officer prior to 2004. These notes included, among other things, intelligence provided by CIA assets, true names of assets, operational meeting locations and phone numbers, and information about covert facilities. As the defendant well knew, many of these entries were classified up to the Secret level and contained national defense information of the United States.

19. On February 9, 2013, an email was posted in the email account described in paragraph 17. The subject of the email was “How’s christina?” The message read:

“Long time no see, How’s christina’s grade book ?
We have not seen her recent grade book for a few months,maybe [sic] little girl always like changing her mind.”

The account had been accessed from China. The government is not alleging that the defendant accessed this account.

20. On January 15, 2018, during an interview with Special Agents of the FBI, in Queens, New York, the defendant falsely denied that he ever kept any work-related notes at home. When shown a photocopy of the front covers of the notebooks described above, as well as a copy of his handwriting therein, the defendant falsely denied that he possessed the notebooks while transiting through Hawaii in August 2012. The defendant falsely denied that either of the books contained notes from asset meetings but conceded that any such notes would be classified. The defendant also falsely denied that he ever put the document described in paragraph 13 on a thumb drive, notwithstanding the fact that he had admitted having done so when he was interviewed by FBI agents on May 28, 2013. Finally, he also falsely told the interviewing agents that in drafting this document he was writing down things "more [like] a diary thing," notwithstanding the fact that on May 28, 2013, he had told FBI agents that he had created the document in response to two taskings from the Chinese IOs.

21. This statement of facts includes those facts necessary to support the plea agreement between the defendant and the United States. It does not include each and every fact known to the defendant or to the United States, and it is not intended to be a full enumeration of all of the facts surrounding the defendant's case.

22. The actions of the defendant, as recounted above, were in all respects knowing and deliberate, and were not committed by mistake, accident, or other innocent reason.
